

g burns jug band

The G Burns Jug Band plays old American music with an intensity and authenticity rarely heard today: urban blues, mountain fiddle, and popular music of the nineteen-twenties and thirties. Based in San Diego, G Burns is led by multi-instrumentalist and native Kentuckian Clinton Davis, who grew up hearing jug band music in its birthplace of Louisville. They have quickly established a presence in the west coast roots music scene, opening for legendary roots music acts like Jim Kweskin, Del McCoury, and Beausoleil avec Michael Doucet. In 2015, No Depression described them as “a joyous and soulful restoration of one of the lost treasures of American musical tradition.”

Terry Roland
No Depression

A joyous and soulful restoration of one of the lost treasures of American musical tradition.

James Chute
San Diego Union-Tribune

Seriously, this is one tight, well-balanced, entertaining five piece ensemble.

Scott McDonald
San Diego CityBeat

They faithfully and flawlessly tackle century-old styles and canvass the early roots of American music...This is the kind of band that could just as easily lead a shoulder-to-shoulder barn stomp into the midnight hour as take the helm in producing period music for Hollywood

Lou Curtiss,
Jazz Roots (KSDS-FM)
Folk Arts Rare Records

Takes you back to the 1920's glory days of the Memphis Jug Band and Cannon's Jug Stompers....These guys have a sound that would do the Golden Era proud."

Justin Lichtenstein
San Diego Uptown News

This group is old school...delivers hillbilly romps that'd sound right at home at Southern shindigs...Look no further if you have a thing for authentic and vibrant takes on a classic American style.

Frank Kocher
San Diego Troubadour

A hillbilly rave-up...Sounds like a freight train hauling ass down the track with some fiddlers and banjo pickers on board.
